QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

JUDGE MORELAND TALKS TO PILGRIMS

Reviewed Pioneer History and Politics In Address Made Last Night

"The pioneer women of Oregon did not sing, 'I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier,' nor did the men preach against preparedness," said Judge J. C. Moreland last evening in his address before the Pilgrim club of the Congregational church.

Tracing the early history of the state, the judge stated that the debates of the constitutional constitution had never been transcribed and that it was not known whether the original notes were in existence.

Up to 1844, the first settlers, coming with Jason Lee and living 10 miles below Salem, were under the laws of the joint occupation of England and this country. An attempt for a constitutional convention was made in 1841, again in 1843 and was voted down both times. Finally the first territorial convention was held in 1849, and even when the state had but a population of only 20,000 there was talk of statehood.

Governors sent from the east were not in high favor with the pioneers, although General Lane, just from the Mexican war, was well received. The pioneers were great voters, said Mr. Moreland, and politics was of the personal kind, especially as the slavery issue was the great question on which the voters divided.

In the first territorial convention, meeting in August, 1857, there were 60 members, of which 33 were farmers and 18 lawyers. In those days, candidates traveled horseback over the country, abusing each other in their political talks, but the best of friends and bedfellows in the evening.

In the first constitutional convention, many favored slavery, but it was finally submitted to the people, along with the question as to whether free negroes were to be admitted into the state. Slavery lost by a large majority, but the vote was heavier against free negroes.

Oregon was admitted to the union by a vote in the U. S. senate of 35 to 17, although in the house of representatives the majority was only six.

The judge was of the opinion that had the original ideas regarding taxation, been adhered to, there would not at present be quite so many good roads and fine buildings, but the burden of taxation would be materially lessened.

To secure the attendance of every boy in the city over 15 years of age, as the occasion will not be limited to those who are delegates, or boys whose fathers are not with them. Men who are active in boys work are welcome to the meeting, provided they are accompanied by a boy over the age of 15.

The banquet committee, the A. O. James Elvin, L. H. Compton, A. O.

Davidson and William Flemming, are preparing to make this one of the largest boy's meetings ever held in the city.
